Remain at the Feet of My Teacher—I Will Purge You

The enemy has come, and he scatters the unlearned, the untaught—he scatters them with the most childish things. My children are so concerned over things that are almost childish in My sight. What I desire is that you remain at the feet of My Teacher. I will purge you. I will purge you—trust Me that I know what I am doing. Trust Me that even you can change.

Pride is thinking your stronghold is stronger than My Spirit. Pride is thinking you are the worst of all, which really is saying, your sin is more powerful than the blood of My Son.

Bow, yield to the Teacher, for I am taking you far higher than you have walked before. This is the season of selling out. Flesh things, this year, are going upon the altar that My fire shall consume quicker than you ever dreamed possible. This is that year. The following year is the year of power, says the Lord.
